Sullivan County, Tennessee

Spring Place was listed on the National Register on April 11, 1973. The house was listed for its local significance in religion/philosophy. Spring Place has since been dismantled and moved to another location within Tennessee sometime between 1985 and present day. As a result of the relocation, the property has lost the significance for which it was listed and no longer retains integrity of setting, design, materials, workmanship and feeling. Therefore, Spring Place should be removed from the National Register.
